Excess lighting eliminated

Campus reacts to crisis; curtails energy consumed

BY TOM HEATH
Pacer Staff Writer

In response to President Nixon's recent measures to conserve energy, UTM officials have begun cutting back on the amount of energy consumed on campus. The Housing Department has issued bulletins to the various dorms requesting that they not use any more lighting than needed.

"Besides having the basement lights in the maintenance department turned off, we are having our dorm hall lights kept at minimum," Earl Wright, assistant director of housing, said.

"We are also asking our residents to keep their windows closed," he said. "Though some dorms are taking it on their own, we're not requesting to leave our lobbies dark."

He said some dorms such as Atrium have indicated residents would voluntarily cut back to 68 degrees as the President has requested.

Safety and Security, which is in charge of campus lighting, has been cutting down on lighting in excess.

"We have 10 out of 46 stadium lot lights burning now, but we need to keep all of them burning until 10 p.m. Then, from 10 until dawn, we'll have 10 burning," he said.

"We have a lot of classes that need this lighting, although the main reason for lighting the lots is to prevent vandalism," he said.

White said that most of these parking lot lights are owned by the Weakly County Electric Service and does not cost the University any more to leave them burning than it does to turn them off.

"We've also cut the tennis courts lights by overriding the timers. If the weather is good, one can arrange ahead of time to have the tennis court lights on," he said. White said if officers see the lights on and no one playing, then they are instructed to turn them off. "That's the extent to which we've cut lighting. We do not think it would be wise to cut elsewhere," he said.

"I don't have any real fear that we will suffer this winter because we use mainly coal and not gas or electricity except for the fieldhouse," said Will Dickerson, director of the Physical Plant. "We've been lucky because of the mild weather. We've had to use less fuel."

Dickerson said there is an ample supply of coal and the University has a performance bond from the Island Creek Coal Co. and Martin Lime and

Exams for Fall Quarter will begin tomorrow and run through next Thursday. The library and snack bar of the cafeteria will observe a schedule of longer hours for the convenience of the student during this time.

The library will be open until 11:00 p.m. Friday with the regular schedule in effect Saturday through Wednesday and then will close at 6 p.m. next Thursday according to Joel Stowers, director of the library.

"Beginning December 14 and continuing through January 4, an 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. schedule will be maintained on weekdays with the library being closed on weekend and university holidays," Stowers said. "Then, when school starts back Winter Quarter, the library will operate on the regular 89 hour per week schedule." (See page 5, col. 4)

Athletic problems surveyed

By GAIL EIDSON
Pacer Sports Editor

"There are shortcomings in our athletic program, but we must all work together and overcome our problems bit by bit," Chancellor Larry T. McGehee said recently.

The Chancellor and members of the UTM Athletic Committee readily admit here are problems surrounding the athletic program, but at the same time they are optimistic about its future.

Athletic Committee members alumni and students all have varied opinions on the present program. However, student and alumni discontent with the football program tends to outweigh the success of the other aspects of the program.

During the Homecoming game last month, former UTM football players gathered at the University and during interviews with several of them, most said they supported the team with contributions.

However, there were varied reactions among the ex-players. One man, who played on the 1930 team said the field is the same as when he played on it 43 years ago.

"I haven't seen the rest of the facilities, but if they have not improved since when I played there is no wonder the program is in bad shape," another former player said.

At the same time, a group of coach and I have seen high school athletes in better condition," said one former player who asked not to be identified.

A player from the 1936 team was highly complimentary of the team.

The most optimistic group interviewed about the athletic situation was the Athletic Committee members. Dr. John Easterhold, committee chairman, said there were limitations on the committee.

"We are only a recommending body," Easterhold said. "We can listen to both sides, investigate and make recommendations to the Board of Trustees, but we cannot take any action."

Easterhold said that for the first time in two years, the committee is attempting to work on recommendations players from the 1935 team took a different viewpoint when they said the players "Simply weren't coached."

MS degree limited by NCATE decision

The master of science degree in education has not been accredited by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) and last year's masters recipients will be recognized only in this state, according to Dr. Karl Keefe, dean of the School of Education.

This will not necessarily have adverse effects for the student, Keefe said. Because Tennessee has reciprocity with most states, the student with a master's degree will be allowed to hold administrative positions

Missouri is one state with which we do not have reciprocity.

Keefe explained that the reciprocity was an informal agreement between Tennessee and a number of other states, who recognize each other's degrees.

The NCATE committee which visited in February this year stated that UTM fell short in six principle areas. The shortcomings included statement of rules and scope, quality of the control of the administrative structure for graduate studies, not enough staff for graduate studies, inadequate standard for admission to graduate program and advisory system for graduate students, inadequate library for graduate research and not enough graduate students for evaluation of the final product.

Improvements can be made but money is needed to improve the library, add more faculty and widen our scope," Keefe stated.

"At present, it is too early to know if any increase is going to be made in the budget for graduate education," stated Provost Jimmy Trentham. "We have to be sure that the money we have is being used wisely. Then, if we need more, we must find sources for it," he added. Trentham also stated the Education department is working on improvements in the graduate program.

New housing plan may be installed

By JIM KEMP
Pacer Staff Writer

Chancellor Larry T. McGehee told a group of "Concerned Students" gathered on the steps of the Administration Building that a plan was being worked out for a differentiated housing policy in 1974 which would call for some of the head residents to be changed.

McGehee also warned the students during the gathering last Thursday that "putting a lot of young people in the positions of head residents would not guarantee good head residents."

Jerry Caruso, SGA Congressperson present at the meeting, told McGehee, "these dorm mothers harass people. Norwood continually harassed students and counselors. She tried to act as judge and prosecutor in G-H."

Caruso also said the students had complained to the housing department and had gotten no results.

"I thought the reason people were moving off campus was for more freedom," McGehee retorted.

"The dorm mothers are helping to drive people off campus," Caruso said.

The Chancellor asked the students what qualifications they felt the dorm mothers should possess.

"Perhaps someone with a degree, maybe a married couple or a graduate student in counseling," Caruso said. One student also suggested that review board should be set up for new students concerning housing.

"The dorm mothers act as flunkies for Safety and Security," Caruso said. "More than half of the dorm mothers act as agents for Safety and Security, and I do not think this is their job."

"The dorm mothers need to know more than how to put out a fire and smell pot," Caruso said. "If the dorm mothers do not like someone, they do not want to help them."

Hearing protest about the swimming pool McGehee said he was the one who decided on it.

"I went from hall to hall, and asked what the residents wanted, and a swimming pool was a major request," McGehee stated.

Jeff Hall, SGA Congressperson from Austin Peay Hall, asked the Chancellor, "What are the possibilities of getting an open house policy by next quarter?"

"I do not feel that there is a possibility of a differentiated housing setup before next Fall," McGehee said. "Because of the involvement of breaking housing contracts." (See page 3, col. 6)

Book prices to increase next year

By JOE HAMM

There will be an increase in book prices next year, but no major increase is foreseen for the rest of the school year, according to Book Store Manager Jerry Carpenter.

"There will be no increase in prices on most books. We will deal as much as we can with used books, and this will help hold prices," he said. "Judging from the books we have reordered, prices on a few will only be twenty or thirty cents higher winter quarter. However, due to the international paper shortage prices will be much higher next fall."

The bookstore orders all of its supplies before each fall quarter so there will be no

New head resident sought for Austin Peay vacancy

By LARRY RHODES
Special Assignment Editor

The Housing Office is seeking applicants for a new head resident in Austin Peay Hall for next quarter, according to George Freeman, director of housing.

Bob Evans, the current head resident, has resigned after spending his first quarter in the position. He says his main reason for resigning was the pay.

"I need to go to law school, and I just can't make enough money to go with what they are paying me," Evans said.

"We are going to have to try to come up with more money if we expect to get a head resident to meet our qualifications," Phillip Watkins, vice chancellor of undergraduate life, said. "I think we will probably reallocate some of the money we already have in order to pay more for the job."

The "qualifications" to which Watkins referred are listed in a formal list of job duties and qualifications for dorm head residents that the Housing Office has compiled. Freeman said the list had been begun last year by that it had only recently been completed.

"This list is sort of a trial balloon right now," Watkins said. "It will have to be approved by Chancellor McGehee and his cabinet. The committee now has the list, but they haven't approved it yet."

Action overdue

Athletic program ready for realistic appraisal

During the last few years, the UTM athletic program has been going downhill at an alarming rate of descent. With the football team losing 17 out of the last 21 games, it is time that the entire program be scrutinized.

For the past five weeks the Pacer has run a series pointing out the shortcomings of UTM's athletic program. Four basic areas that are the footbeds for the problems need to be pointed out.

Problems pointed out

First came the discussion of athletic feeding where it was learned that players were concerned about quantity and quality of food, deficient diets and general apathetic attitude.

The second area focused on the lack of a sufficiently-equipped training room, weight room and locker room. The answer given by the Administration was that this would be taken care of in the future.

The third point focused on the problem of recruitment. It was learned the University is limited as to the value of out-of-state scholarships and in the total number that could be given.

The fourth area explored was of the budget and it was generally concluded the lack of money was being felt in all these areas.

Yet, as is the case in so many instances on this campus, most of these facts are known, but so little is being done to rectify the situation. The time now has come for action.

Solutions desired

It is then in order that some possible solutions be considered.

First, to the Administration. Since, money is probably the most important single aspect to be considered, it must be the Administration's responsibility to get more money for the upgrading of the athletic program. Here these efforts should not only be charted toward UTK or the state Legislature but also toward gaining contributions and possible contributors. It is the Administration's duty to put on the public relation hat and get financial supporters to help build a winning athletic program.

The Administration should also take the position that they are going to overtly support the athletic program, since there can be no question that it has to be an all or nothing situation.

Next in line of responsibility comes the Athletic Committee. Whatever relationship that existed last year that caused the committee not to live up to its charge is over. Now with the able leadership of Dr. John Eisterhold the committee should take their duties seriously and do something besides being a committee in name only. Such apathy was shown at the first meeting where a quorum was not present. If the members are unable-or unwilling-to be effective then it is the job of the Administration to replace them and find people who will do the job.

Afflicted athletes

The people that are being directly affected and hurt are the athletes. They are the ones that have more reason for being upset than anyone else. No longer should they live in fear of telling it how it really is. If they really care about the future of UTM Athletics they should come forward and tell why they have not been able to give their best possible performance.

Finally, it would be impossible and unfair to discuss the athletic program without discussing the coaching staff. The time has come for UTM to get out of the shadows of past glory and stop looking over its shoulders at the Tangerine Bowl. The coaches have a responsibility not only to the players, but also to the students and the Administration. It is their primary duty to develop a winning program. If it is not being done, then questions have to be asked.

In this light, the coaches should be asked to submit their resignations and rely on their records when considering their acceptance or rejection. After all, it is the sporting thing to do. Of course, if they refuse to follow through then it would seem to be the job of the Administration to ask for such resignations and consider their retention on past performance and future possibilities.

It is time that this campus either give its full support or pack up and say it never cared at all, because the present situation lies somewhere between a charade and a hoax, neither of which the University needs or wants.

Good-bye is a hard word to say

Good-bye is usually a word that indicates the finality of a departure. It is a word, which while conveying a feeling of impending loneliness, at the same time holds a large measure of the hopes and dreams by the person leaving and those watching him leaving that the future will provide all desired fulfillments and aspirations.

Thus good-bye in this case, in a very real sense, must be said with mixed emotions when referring to one of the mainstays of The Pacer, Larry Rhodes, who is graduating this quarter and will not be back with the newspaper next quarter.

It is very difficult to find a beginning point when talking about Larry and The Pacer because over the years, the two have largely become synonymous. But if there must be a beginning-as all rational quantities must have-then it probably would be best to start with Larry as feature editor. Larry, who developed a keen insight and shrewd perception to dig up the offbeat but important stories and put them into a meaningful form which could be comprehended by the reader.

Then one can look a Larry as managing editor and executive editor, positions which require him to give the highest degree of integrity and fierce loyalty, to the concept of honest journalism. A degree which can only be equaled by his dogmatic determination of adhering to these concepts.

And this quarter Larry returned, to work without pay, as special assignments editor. He developed that position from the embryonic stages of concept into a viable reality.

During his three years with The Pacer, Larry and staff have shared laughter and tears, have known joy and anger and together have withstood an occasional barrage and tempest.

Larry has said that he considers himself a professional journalist-and there can be no mistake, this, probably more than anything else that could be said, is an undeniable truth.

Praise given

To the Editor:

During my two years as advisor to the Pacer, I had an opportunity to work with many highly motivated and talented students. Larry Rhodes, who will be graduating at the end of this quarter and leaving the Pacer staff after three years of service, was a truly exceptional student editor.

When things were rough around the office, when there were copy shortages, financial crises, or emergency stories to be done, I knew and the whole staff knew, that Larry could always be counted upon to come through for the newspaper. He made my job as advisor immeasurably more pleasurable because of this dedication.

I know that I express the sentiments of all those who worked with Larry, and who knew him as a fellow staffer and friend, when I say that we will miss his good humor, good writing, and good fellowship.

Food problems

To the Editor:

In my three quarters at Martin, I have heard quite a few complaints about Food Services and the people who work there. I have heard very little praise. Perhaps, detractors have not considered what a difficult job it is to feed hundreds of students food that is reasonably-priced and edible. The fact that citizens of Martin often eat on campus is one indicator of how well our food compares with that served off campus.

It is remarkable that Food Services has been able to maintain their prices and quality as well as they have in the face of inflation that has hit the food industry as hard as it has hit any.

Mr. Broderick has remained receptive to any suggestions and comments and I know, personally, of several instances in which he has acted on the basis of complaints within a few hours. For instance, in the SnackBar, the potato chips had to be removed because of a few students who would eat out of the jar like animals. In response to a complaint, the potato chips were returned. Bringing them back placed an extra burden on the counter help, but if provided a needed service to the students. Now, it would seem that there are two types of people in the lunchroom-the Food Services people who are trying to feed the students well and in as short a time as possible, and the spoiled brats who holler, "Gimme corn dog!"

True, this is an oversimplification, but the point remains. How many times in the space of an hour have you heard a student, of any color, say "please" or "thank-you"? It is seldom that you even see a smile. Is it any wonder that the counter help withdraws into a close-knit group that must joke occasionally to maintain their sanity?

How would you like to feed hundreds of cold stares? Machines are suited for that, but I haven't heard anyone advocating a return to those "push-button bandits" of the past.

Food services are provided by the college-but who is the "college"? We are. If students cannot help make mealtime pleasant by being polite or by separating paper refuse from plates-a small item, but a helpful one-then, I suppose that Mr. Broderick will have to find another way to slop the hogs.

Odyssey

By DAN RICHARDSON

Where ends cyclic mediocrity?

It was just ten years ago that John Fitzgerald Kennedy, thirty-fifth President of the United States, was assassinated in Dallas, Texas.

For many of us the assassination was the first in a continuing series of brutal, senseless acts of violence that included the mindless murders of Martin Luther King and Robert Kennedy, the cold-blooded killings at Kent State and Jackson State, and the seemingly unceasing bloodlust that history would come to designate as the Vietnam War. The times, it has been said, they were a-changing, and the changes could only be seen as for the worse.

John Kennedy made many mistakes and did not have many spectacular achievements during his thousand days in the White House, and there can be doubt expressed that he will be recalled as one of the truly great American Presidents. However, though his accomplishments as the nation's leader might have been relatively few, he nevertheless gave this country something else that might have been much more important.

What Kennedy gave us that will last forever in the memories of the citizenry was character, direction, drive, energy, faith in the processes of government, hopes for the future, dynamic leadership and vision. When the assassin put an end to the leadership of John Kennedy, he apparently put an end to these good qualities in the American Presidency as well.

For when Lyndon Johnson left the White House in 1968, he was discredited and castigated as a misguided cattle rancher who was leading the country toward the depths of ruin. And the Top Man today (God help us) has now more than ever-directed us down the road to deceit, distrust, dishonesty and numerous other types of devility.

Whereas Kennedy strived for the best, Nixon seems to strive only for the very least that will get him by. Watergate, the Ellsberg burglary, illicit campaign contributions, the luxurious estates at San Clemente and Key Biscayne-all these have alerted us to a Presidency devoid of effective leadership, moral convictions, and aspirations of higher ideals.

The true pity of it all, however, lies in the fact that the example set by the Marvellous Milhous has permeated other segments of American life, including our own university here in the merry town of Martin.

There can be little doubt that the University administration does not seek to give us the best.

We are stuck with a pistol-packing, former milk truck driver as the head of the campus SS-Safety and Security, that is. Food Services insists on providing us with food in all probability would be rejected by the penquins of the Antarctic, The book store, home of the latest in 1984 camera snoop systems, has consistently charged us the highest prices east of the Pecos. Dormitory residents have been heard to complain of the Housing Office creating fabrications at the drop of a hat, of providing the hat, and then dropping it. And just as Herr Nixon seldom listens to the opinions and advice of his constituents, so does our administration rarely seek the opinions of its students. Even the Chancellor has slid more into the background of things and his leadership, once so evident, is now subject to questions.

Whenever one thinks of the Kennedy years, there comes a poignancy created by thoughts of what might have been. But all things pass, and the Kennedy dream-Edward notwithstanding-has faded into the recesses of the peoples' minds. Perhaps, too, the mediocrity of the University administration will pass. There is, however, no sense in talking about what might have been on this campus, for there should only be a discussion of what can be.

Our dreams are not yet dead and if our administrators are not above making the effort, then what can be will indeed be worth striving for.

Guest column

By

GERALD BASHAM

Cashing a check on the way to class or on lunch hour is a physical impossibility here at UT Martin. Our typical student and hero, Jacques Costyou, will give us an example.

Jacques comes to the top of the stairs in the student center and sees a group of students gathered around the information desk. Being a concerned student Jacques rushed up to see what the problem is. But it is only the check cashing line. Jacques asks a haggard student why he has been standing in line for seventeen and one half minutes to cash his check. The student said, "Purell Boyster just happened to be using the office phone. Jacques pressed closer through the crowd to see what phone call could be so important that the ever industrious Purell Boyster would stop performing her vital campus function.

As Jacques comes within hearing range he hears Purell discussing what she is going to fix for dinner that very night. He nudges a girl, who has fallen asleep on the counter, and asks how long Purell has been talking about tonight's dinner and ignoring her duties. After a good yawn the girl rubs her eyes and tells Jacques she had missed the dinner discussion because she had fallen asleep after the previous call with a dressmaker. The girl assures Jacques Costyou she missed nothing about the new A-line dress Purell is having made.

Just as the girl finishes her story, a great gasp sweeps through the crowds-Purell had hung up the phone and turns to the first student who was well prepared with I.D. card, driver's license, draft card, dorm phone number, dorm address, home address, home phone number and the two notary public certifications of his identity.

This is great thought Jacques the line will resume its usual slow pace. But the poor student had forgotten he had been standing there since yesterday-the date was wrong. Of course our dear Purell Boyster, ever on the job, catches the gross student error and banishes him to the end of the line.

Our hero decides he needs plenty of time in a place where no one will bother him. The last we see of our beloved Jacques Costyou he is sitting in the UT Bone waiting for the water and menu, waiting to give his order, waiting.

We feel sure that with the amount of time persons has to spend in the UT Bone waiting for service that Jacques will have a solution to the inert Purell Boyster.

Projections

JERRY CARUSO

It's Christmas time-again. The quarter is at an end and so is Projections. I've written the column for two years and people have constantly told me "You never write about the good things that happen."

Christmas carols follow me through the stores like Marley's Ghost. They say something positive. I've been told to go to hell (indirectly) and the only thing I can say is ya'll come. Why am I waiting to write?

I am waiting to write about the rebirth of wonder-at Christmas. I am waiting for the Christ Child to crawl from his paper-mache crib into the womb of an anonymous universal mother. I am waiting for Billy Graham, the Pope and others to quit pushing religion like a deoderant and give their year earnings to the poor.

I am waiting for Christians to become Christ-like and realize there are other ways. I am waiting for Santa Claus to climb out of the mouldering closet of man's imagination and distribute doweries of peace-to all men. I am waiting for the Christmas lights to go out and the decorations to shatter in the wind and snow of that Night. I am waiting to obtain the maturity of a child on Christmas morning. I am waiting to rejoice in the closeness of friends and the birth of Wonder. The end.

Jewelry offered to students

Craftsman exhibits wares

By PATT ELMORE
Pacer Feature Editor

Amid the bustle of lunchtime activities, Michael Anton Bruckdorfer of St. Louis displayed his creations yesterday.

Surrounded by tables covered with paintings, copper, jewelry and glass figurines, Bruckdorfer leaned over a small work table, pounding, filing and polishing copper into shape.

"It's almost like sewing," Bruckdorfer commented as he twisted the copper wire into a tear-drop shape. He glanced up at the crowd of students watching him and grinned, "I guess you're all wondering what I'm making. Well, I don't know. I guess what I'm doing is recycling."

"I just love it," one coed cooed, picking up a ring of twisted copper.

"Be sure and pick out one that fits," Bruckdorfer told her. "If there isn't one there, I'll make one to fit."

"My father does the glass sculpture," Bruckdorfer continued as one coed picked up a tiny figurine marked "please don't handle glass."

"I'm learning to do it. but it's hard."

A male student eyed the table carefully then lamented slightly under his breath, "Hmmm, no roach clips."

"I really just want to make jewelry, not little nick-nacks," Bruckdorfer grinned up at the disappointed shopper. "I guess that's my problem. I've always been so pure."

According to Bruckdorfer, he first began "exploiting" his jewelry skill this summer.

"This summer I've been to a lot of fairs and I'd like to travel to colleges," Bruckdorfer, who exhibited his wares at Folk Fair '73, said.

"I've been involved in the arts since I was four years old," Bruckdorfer continued. He admits to five "official" years of college studying the arts and is a former college instructor in "just about anything in the arts except history."

He recalled one experiment in his class when he darkened the room, handed his students an object and told them to draw it in the dark.

"Some of them came out with better drawings than they did in the light," Bruckdorfer laughed.

"I've also written and illustrated five children's books," Bruckdorfer said,

"But they've never been published."

Bruckdorfer will be back in the University Center this afternoon from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., offering his goods to the UTM consumer.

"I'll possibly be staying around for a couple of days talking to friends," Bruckdorfer said as he twisted the last copper filament into shape and held up the finished piece. "Well, how do you like it?"

UTM junior chosen as legislative intern

By DANNY LANNOM

Billy T. Reeves, junior in secondary education with a concentration in social science, has been selected as an intern to the 1974 Tennessee Legislative Internship Program.

Reeves is one of 10 to 12 interns selected from among 50 applicants from UTM, UTC, UTK, Vanderbilt, Peabody, Middle Tennessee State University and East Tennessee State University. The selection committee, composed of five university teachers from across the state, was headed by Dr. Thomas Unga, chairman of the UTK political science department.

Each intern will serve as a staff assistant to a legislative committee, helping with its research, according to Reeves. Interns will receive a $315 a month stipend and may earn up to nine hours credit in political science for their work.

With his particular assignment not being known, Reeves said he hoped to work with either the agriculture committee or the judicial committee. He will receive his assignment in January and will work with the legislature from January through April.

Dr. Ted Mosch, assistant professor of political science, the program's UTM coordinator and selection com-

Chancellor raps

Chancellor Larry McGehee talked with members of the Concerned Students group at a rally on the steps of the Administration Building last Thursday. He announced plans for a differentiated housing program for 1974.

In an interview prior to the meeting, the Chancellor said, "The members of Concerned Students that I have talked to seem to have bonafide concerns and are pretty level headed. I feel that the 'Concerned Students' movement is effective and that they are going through the right channels by going to the SGA."

McGehee also stated that some of the "Concerned Students" have been making and keeping appointments with him, while some have not been keeping their appointments.

Congressperson Tom Brock later commented, "All clear purposes of the Concerned Students have been distorted by their own disorganization and lack of action. They are doing nothing more than engaging in worn out rhetoric."

"I feel it should be left up to them whether or not they want to organize, and I feel that their attempts to take over the Independent Student Association are a part of due change," McGehee said.

McGehee also said that he feels that some type of differentiated housing policy will be set up, but it will probably not take place before next Fall.

Speaking in terms of student demonstrations, McGehee stated, "I have not really considered handling a violent student demonstration, but what I fear most about violence is anti-violence."

No ambulance was available

With no ambulance at the scene, Referee George Fain of Milan suffered a seizure on the field during the UTM-Livingston football game here Nov. 17.

Normally a county ambulance is on hand at the games, Robert Carroll, head football coach, said.

"We give them tickets to the games and encourage them to come," Carroll explained, "but they do have certain requirements in the county, and if they get a call from another area, they have to leave."

Coach Carroll added there is no conference rule requiring the presence of ambulances at the games.

Losing year brings talk of future; awards presented to top athletes

By DAN MORRIS
Pacer Sports Writer

Hampered by inexperience and depth, UTM produced its third straight losing football season this year, managing a 2-8-1 record.

"When you lose three of your first four ball games by one touchdown it seems to keep you from making the progress you'd like to make," Coach Robert Carroll said. "The thing we were very pleased with this year is that the team did continue to fight back during the season. They never gave up."

UTM fought for 1440 net yards rushing and 1275 yards passing, while yielding 1856 and 1192 net yards respectively to opponents this season.

The Pacers allowed 169 first downs and lost 22 fumbles, compared to their own 153 first down total and 17 fumbles lost by opponents. UTM scored 12 touchdowns, 12 extra points, four field goals and two safeties.

Opponents contributed 27 TDs, 21 PATs and five field goals. UTM grabbed 17 interceptions with opponents snagging 15.

The Pacers lost four of eight games by only a touchdown or less, and were 2-1-1 in their last four contests.

"Those last four games gave us the momentum that we need to carry over into next year," said Carroll. "Now, if only our players continue to work together, as they did at the latter part of the year, then I think we're on our way."

"I think now they understand what it takes to win," continued Carroll, "and we were very pleased with this year's effort, particularly in the last ball game, when they had their backs to the wall and they came back and kept fighting. I think more than anything else, that we did get the momentum we need in order to get back to being a championship ball club."

Forty-six of the fifty-five players, who dressed for the last ball game, will be returning for UTM. There are nine seniors graduating.

"We're losing some very fine football players," said Carroll. "Defensively, we lose two linebackers and two defensive backs, but we redshirted transfers and freshmen to fill these slots. We're also recruiting to fill the positions that the seniors vacated."

A more experienced team will be fielded next season, and this improved UTM's chances for a winning record, according to Carroll. "We are optimistic about next year," he said, "because we played a lot of young players this year and they learned a lot. Sure, they made some mistakes, but the only way you're going to get back the experience you need is to play. We played them this year, and now I think they are much better football players. We are looking forward to next year."

An improved schedule next season may help the Pacer's chances. This year six of their first nine games were on the road. Next year the schedule is more favorably staggered. "This past season, in all fairness to the players, I think they were travel weary at times," Carroll said. "Next year we open at home, and I think winning the first one is always extremely important. This is something that will work to our advantage."

Monday night the team held its annual appreciation dinner. Awards were given to those individuals voted by their teammates as Most Valuable Players. The defensive back award was decided by a point system. Captain Randy Giltner, who intercepted four passes and recovered two fumbles, won that honor. John Porter, a 6-1, 195 pound junior defensive end, received the defensive lineman award.

Most valuable offensive back went to freshman tailback Randy Cousar, who gained 633 net yards in 168 attempts, averaged 3.8 yards per carry and 57.5 yards a game while scoring three TDs. A tie resulted in the offensive line man award. George "Gramps" Yeager, a 6-1, 243 pound sophomore tackle, tied Eddie Cox, a Junior College transfer. Cox was also named to the All Gulf South Conference first team as an offensive guard.

Leading scorers for the Pacers were Johnny Brundige, who booted 21 points, Cousar with 18, Grady Maddox, who snagged two aeriels for scores, and Marvin West, a two touchdown runner.

UTM finished last in the GSC standings with a 1-5-1 record.

One on one tournament set for January 8 and 9

Plans for a one and one tournament for all women on campus Jan. 8 and 9 are being finalized according to Nadine Gearin, women's intercollegiate basketball coach and Bettye Giles, department head.

Essentially the competition is the same as has been televised this past season during the half time of NBA games. Play consists of one person competing against another until one reaches a score of 20, with a lead of 4 points.

According to Miss Giles the competition shall be divided into two divisions, one for the UTM intercollegiate basketball women and the other division for all other regularly enrolled women students.

Miss Gearin added that to enhance the competitive spirit there will be over $300 worth of merchandise and prizes contributed by local merchants in an endeavor to promote women's basketball here. The prizes will be awarded in the two divisions, according to the number of people participating in each group.

Entry blanks may be picked up in Miss Gearin's office in the old gym. The entry blanks must be filled out and returned by 5 p.m. Friday, Jan. 4. Drawings for positions will be Monday Jan. 7.

Trophies will be awarded to the top two individuals in the intercollegiate division and the top four individuals in the regular division. Intramural points will also be awarded.

Ladies open with win against Murray State

UTM's Lady Pacers opened their 73-74 basketball season with a 52-36 home court victory over Murray State last night. The Pacerettes overcame cold shooting in the opening quarter to pull to a 20-14 half-time lead. In the second half UTM substituted freely and several times led by as much as 20 points.

Betsy Wade led the scores for the Pacerettes with 12 points. Other scorers were: Pat Head and Bonnie Brooks with 8, Jan Godwin had 7, Janis Ross 6, Dawn Davidson, Janis Elliot, Sharon Brashers and Lana Maness each had 2 and Starr Hatler had 1 point. Gene Thompson topped Murray State scores with a 13 point performance.

The Lady Pacers held a clear edge in rebounds 50-30. Pat Head was the leading rebounder for UTM with 11. Julia White and Betsy Wade each had 7. Jana Jones led Murray State with 10. For the first time there will be a 50 cent admission charge. "Our budget is limited," said Coach Nadine Gearin. "We would like to pay some of the women's expenses when the team travels."

Women's athletics does not get any funds from the student fees like other athletic programs, she said.

"Generally we will use the money for whatever the team needs," Miss Gearin said.

After last night's game the Pacerettes will take a break until next Friday when they travel to Mississippi College for Women to play in their Christmas tournament. Eight teams will be participating including four from Tennessee, two from Mississippi, one from Texas and one from Louisiana. In the opening round UTM meets North West Louisiana at 3:30 p.m. Friday.

Athletic problems

more apathy toward the athletic program this year than any group. Vacant stadium seats at every home football game merely reinforces this observation.

Students have said a massive rebuilding program should be started. Several students have said the reason they do not go to games is because the team has consistently been losing games.

But students, administrators, and alumni generally agree on one point—the athletic program in general and the football program in particular cannot continue with its current trend.

Pacers lose opener to Bradley; Lambuth tip-off set for Saturday

By BUDDY SMOTHERS
Pacer Sports Writer

The Pacer Basketball team will try to get on the winning track this week as they battle Arkansas and Lambuth.

The Pacers played the Razorbacks last night in Fayetteville and will open their home season at 7:30 p.m. Saturday night against Lambuth College.

Arkansas lost its opening game to UCLA 101-77, however, Lambuth has a 3-1 slate for the season following a 91-83 loss to Florence state. Belhaven 87-73 in Florence. Sturday night. Ricky Delk led Lambuth in scoring in that game with 25 points. Delk is a key man in the Eagle's offense.

The Pacers record stands at 0-1 after an opening game 99-65 loss to Bradley last Saturday night in Peoria, Ill. The game marked the nineteenth consecutive season the Braves have won their home opener.

Hot shooting by UTM in the first half kept the close till halftime. Bradley led at the half 52-39. In the second half, however, the Pacer shooting went cold and allowed Bradley to pull away to a comfortable lead and maintain it for a big victory.

Arthur Boykin led the Pacers in scoring with 17 points. He was followed by Tim Furches with 12, Jim Martin and Harry Kiekman, 10, Norman Abney and Ken Redmond, 6. Bennie Patterson and Mike Baker scored two points each.

Seymour Reed took game honors as he tossed in 22 points for the Braves.

UTM led in rebounding of 40-39. Jim Martin was the Pacers' leading rebounder as he pulled down 12. He and Reed tied for the game highs.

The shooting percentages found Bradley with an advantage in both field goals and free throws. The Braves led UTM in field goal percentage with a margin of 46 per cent to 42 per cent for the Pacers. At the line Bradley hit on 13 of 18 for 72.2 per cent while the Pacers managed five of 10 for a 50 per cent mark.

The Pacer Junior Varsity will also open their home season Saturday against Crawley Ridge Junior College. The game will be held prior to the varsity contest. Tip off is set for 5:30 p.m. in the Fieldhouse.

Gas shortage concerns managers

Stations feel crisis effects

By LARRY RHODES
Special Assignments Editor
Five Martin gas station managers selected at random for a survey pertaining to the current fuel shortage say the effects of the shortage have reached their business only slightly and that their customers are not taking the shortage seriously.

The manager of Suiters Kerr-McGee station on the Fulton Highway, one of two stations to stay open Sunday after President Nixon's request that stations close, reported a "tremendous" Sunday business. He said Saturday business was the "biggest we've ever had" due to motorists' fears that they might run out of fuel Sunday.

"They (the government) want to take about fifteen to twenty per cent of our business away, and if they do, I think the oil companies ought to pay us more profit. If they would, I would gladly close on Sundays to help the energy crisis."

"We were open Sunday from 1 p.m. till 6 a.m. and will be until the government passes a law against us staying open on Sundays," the manager of the University Arco station on University street, the other Martin station open last Sunday. He, in contrast to the manager at Suiters, claimed he noticed no change in last Sunday's business from the average Sunday. Moreover, he claimed no noticeable increase in last Saturday or Monday's business.

White's Esso on Elm St. and Pearce DX on Lovelace claimed they had greater-than-normal business last Saturday with the manager at Pearce comparing it to a holiday. University Gulf on Lovelace, on the other hand, termed their Saturday and Sunday business as quiet. University Gulf and University Arco are located across the street from each other and are next to UTM.

Four out of the five stations surveyed claimed their oil companies had cut their gasoline quotas this month, but they claimed that their cutbacks were still not very serious. Suiters Kerr-McGee was the only station who claimed they had not had a quota cutback.

White's Esso said they had increased their gasoline prices 3 cents since the energy crisis, and Pearce DX said they had gone up 2 cents since last week. University Gulf and University Arco said their prices hadn't increased and that they would increase only when their competing companies did. The manager of Suiters Kerr-McGee said he hadn't increased prices, but he predicted that all the stations would eventually increase gas prices to "somewhere in the 50's."

All five of the station managers admitted they might have to cut back on their opening hours if the shortage got worse and their quotas were cut substantially.

The managers all said their customers have been denying that there was a fuel shortage and claiming that the oil companies were just trying to stage a fake shortage to make prices increase. Most of the managers said their customers were even laughing at the situation.

"I just don't know for sure if the oil companies have a shortage of gas or not," Suiters' manager said. "But it's a shortage to me. I can't get any gas, and if I can't, the customers can't."

The snack bar of the cafeteria will be open on an experimental basis tonight and tomorrow night, according to John Bucy, assistant director of the University Center. "The snack bar will definitely be open till midnight and possibly later if the crowd is large enough to warrant us keeping it open," Bucy said.

This is only on an experimental basis and if enough students respond to the expanded hours Thursday and Friday, the snack bar will continue to be open on an expanded schedule the other days of exam week, Bucy said.

Campus cutbacks

The university has been cutting back on the use of lights, due to the energy crisis. However, Safety and Security says these lights are owned by the Weakly County Electric Service and do not cost the university any more to burn them than to leave them off. Therefore these lights are still being used regularly.

Gravel Co. to supply the school's coal needs and provide shipping until June. Dickerson said the temperature will be kept lightly lower than it has been in the past in campus buildings. In buildings with a central control system this will be done throughout the building at one point, he said, while in buildings where individual air handling units are in the rooms, the faculty and staff will be instructed to keep usage to a minimum, he said.

"The induced draft fans in the heating plant have been enlarged from 15 to 30 horsepower before our dust collectors are put into service. In relation to the total campus, this will be a minor pull on the electricity used," he said.

"The University has a policy of saving energy wherever possible and we are taking steps in that direction, Dickerson said. Also, all University vehicles are to be driven at no more than 50 miles per hour, Dickerson said.

"If a person is caught driving a state owned vehicle at over 50 the Tennessee Highway Patrol is authorized to fine the driver," he said.

Television set stolen, machines vandalized

By JIM KEMP
Pacer Staff Writer

A television set was reported stolen from the Fine Arts Building sometime last week, according to Ted Council, assistant director of Safety and Security.

"The set, a black and white Panasonic with a 12 inch screen and valued at approximately $90, was discovered missing last Thursday, Council said."

The case was reported to Safety and Security last Friday, but it is not known how long the television has been missing."

The set was the type used by the Education Department, Council said.

It was also reported to Safety and Security this week that two vending machines in Austin Peay had been broken into, Council said. The first break in was reported Monday, which occurred in the basement of C unit, at 3:15 a.m.

"The vandals pried the lock and hasp off the machine and took the money box. The amount of money taken is not presently known," Council stated.

The second break, which was reported at 5:34 a.m. Tuesday, occurred in the basement of D unit, according to Council.

"In this case, the vandals knocked out the glass on the display case and took the available merchandise, but left the cash box," Council said.

Courses on life offered in winter

By BARBRA WELCH
Pacer Staff Writer

Two new courses, Introduction to Transactional Analysis 1115 and Human Relations 3113, are being offered Winter Quarter under general studies.

"These courses will help the student learn more about his own life in terms of the elementary concepts covered in the courses," stated Dr. Ron Claxson, instructor for the courses.

The Introduction to Transactional Analysis with one hour credit will meet from 10-12 Thursday and two sections will meet by arrangement in the afternoon or evening, open to freshman. This course is part of the package offered during Freshman Studies Week and must be completed before freshmen can receive three credit hours for the course began in the studies week.

Introduction to Human Relations with one hour credit will meet from 2-4:30 on Thursday with one group meeting the first weeks of the quarter and another the last weeks. This course is open to any upper division student and with the permission of the instructors, Claxson said.

New head resident

Watkins said, due to the short length of the time that the Housing Office has to select the head resident in Austin Peay Hall, someone would probably be selected for the job according to the list of qualifications as it now stands. He also said he had sent SGA President Roy Herron a copy of the list to try to get some input and suggestions about it from the Student Government.

The new Austin Peay head resident will be selected by a committee which will include students, according to Freeman. Freeman said Watkins would appoint the committee.

Housing will choose an "acting" head resident to fill the position in Austin Peay if they can't find a man for the job by next quarter who meets all the qualifications, according to Watkins and Freeman.

Vanguard to present 'Sea Gull' this winter

Vanguard Theatre will be producing several plays Winter Quarter, including its major production, "The Sea Gull" by Anton Chekhov. There will also be a production of Charles Gordon's "No Place to Be Somebody" as well as several other student directed plays.

"The Sea Gull," now in its third month of rehearsal, will be produced near the end of February in the Fine Arts Auditorium.

A black theatre group is being formed and their first production will be "No Place to Be Somebody," which is being directed by Marsha Edwards.

There will also be an additional number of student directed, full length plays, including "Look Back in Anger" by John Osborne. These plays will be produced early in March and readings for these plays will be held early in January. There will be many parts, so anyone interested in becoming involved in any phase of the theatre is encouraged to come and participate. Notices will be posted as to the time and place of the readings early in January.

Humane Society planned

By PATT ELMORE

UTM student Calvin Moore is trying to establish a branch of the American Humane Society in Martin.

"What I have tried to set up is a pet adoption clinic along with Mary Beth Davidson of the PR department," Moore said. The clinic will also provide spaying and neutering services, Moore stated.

The proposed clinic would care for homeless animals and provide medical care for the sick ones, Moore said. Unadoptable animals, he continued, would be humanely destroyed.

As of last spring, Moore said, Martin disposed of stray dogs by shooting them. A tranquilizer gun has been ordered but is not due to arrive until January, he said.

"We already have the acreage for the clinic," Moore said. "An instructor on campus, as of last spring quarter, has given us permission to use some of his land."

"I'd be satisfied with a shack and a fence to start out with," Moore commented of his dream.

"Everyone seems in full agreement and support of the clinic as soon as the County Court passes it," Moore said. "I plan to go to County Court as soon as I can next quarter."

His project has the support of Sen Birch Bayh, D-Ind., State Rep. Larry Bates, Congressman Ed Jones and several influential people in town, Moore explained. Gov. Winfield Dunn wrote Moore of his interest in animal legislation and the proposed clinic.

Since 1970, the population of stray and abandoned pets has continued to increase, creating what the Journal of Modern Veterinary Practice has called the pet population bomb.

This explosion in the population of roaming animals creates serious problems for both the animals and the humans living in America's urban areas. In addition to the injury and starvation faced by the animals themselves, this wild dog and cat population presents important health problems.

Moore, a Dyersburg senior studying pre-law, became interested in the pet problem when dogs dumped near his home caused extensive damage to his family's flower beds. In 1970 he helped start a humane society in Dyersburg.

He began researching the possibility of organizing a society in Martin in spring 1973. On Sen. Bayh's recommendation, Moore contacted the Los Angeles Humane Society, which Moore called the best in the nation. "We can get ideas from L.A.'s and scale them down to our own needs," Moore said. Other individuals have organized animal shelters, Moore explained.

Moore, a confessed animal lover, feels that the stray animals on campus and elsewhere are a real problem.

"We have people on campus who find these animals and take them to vets and pay out of their pockets," Moore continued. He admitted he had found homes for three animals himself.

"I've seen little pups," Moore continued, "without their eyes open, ditched on the interstate. This just isn't right.

Help raising money, finding stray animals transmitting them to the clinic and finding homes will be needed, Moore added. All interested volunteers are urged to contact Moore or Ms. Davidson.

UTM selects 35 students for 'Who's Who' honors

By RHONDA WELCH
Pacer Staff Writer

Thirty-five UTM students were selected for Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges, according to Dr. Donald Sexton, assistant dean of students.

Each of the six academic units granting degrees were permitted to nominate one student per 25 junior senior students expected to receive their undergraduate degree or higher between September, 1973 and June, 1975.

Six administrative officers could also nominate one student, according to Sexton. These were the office of undergraduate life, the library, office of development, office of admissions and records, office of business affairs and department of military science.

Each university approved organization could also nominate one student.

A selection committee composed of six faculty and five students appointed by SGA President, Roy Herron reviewed each of the nominations.

Each committee member read the ballots and on a scale of one to ten accessed each category, the maximum being thirty points per ballot, Sexton said. The total number of points were then tabulated and the students ranked one through thirty-five.

The students were those who have shown outstanding ability in scholarship, participation and leadership on campus, and citizenship and community service, Sexton said.

These students are: Gayle Franklin Bailey, Judy Marie Broadstreet, John William Brockwell, Jr., Freeman
